Chapter And Verse

Headed Home

We are quickly approaching another Easter, and another opportunity to inhale deeply the meaning of Easter. Having endured a worldwide pandemic lockdown year, this may be the year when your faith becomes front-and-center in your life. Walking with Jesus changed an unlikely group of fishermen, tax collectors and zealots into courageous messengers of the Easter message. All of these men, with the exception of John, died martyr's deaths because they could not recant their faith. This can be the year your faith grows that strong and daily guides your steps.

Apparently, life offers us only two opposing views – live as if life exists only here and now, or live as sojourners passing through this life destined to return to our creator. On the first path daily 21st century life is everything. Wow, everything? Let's look at a snapshot of yesterday in that world. Yesterday, an immigrant Pakistani man with a wife and children was working as an Uber Eats driver when his car was hijacked. Desperate to keep his car he held the driver's side door open hanging on to prevent two teenage girls from stealing the car. They stomped on the gas and away the car went for approximately one block before it struck other cars and rolled over. The girls climbed out unhurt. The man was thrown onto the sidewalk and died. Video shows the girls noticeably upset because one of them left a cell phone in the car. This happens while the blood-soaked body of the car's owner lies nearby. Fortunately, for the news media the people witnessing this horrific event had the presence of mind to record everything on their cell phones. Unfortunately, nobody seemed to care enough to attempt to help the man bleeding on the sidewalk. That's your everything! That's all there is – no hope, no future, just survival until death ends everything. However, if we are "Easter" people this world is not our home. We are sojourners through this time and place. We seek the best for all people, but understand that human depravity brings hate, destruction, pain, and suffering everywhere on this planet. We cannot expect this to change. We can live the life Jesus has shown us by helping others, loving our neighbors, and sharing our bounty with the needy. But we are heading home, because we are "Easter" people, and He is risen indeed! Praise God.

Sharing our Earthy Journey,
Ken Keipper

But you, Lord are a compassionate and gracious God, slow to anger, abounding in love and faithfulness. - Psalm 86:15
